

Proxmire Rips Into Capitol Rebuilding Plans as Wasteful

Calls $34 Million Facelifting Idea Unnecessary 'Extravaganza'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says the plan to put a new face on the 140-year-old west wall of the nation's Capitol is a "$34-million extravaganza" and "an insult to the intelligence of Congress."

House Speaker John W. McCormack and Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, members of the five-member Commission for the Extension of the Capitol, announced approval of the face-lifting project Friday. It would be the historic building's most extensive renovation in 100 years.

McCormack and Dirksen estimated the cost at $34 million. They said the old front was so cracked and weakened that a minor explosion or even a sonic boom could cause it to crumble. Since last fall timbers have braced areas where huge cracks are visible.

Marble Replacement

The plans, which must get approval of the House and Senate and their appropriations committees, call for completely removing the sandstone face of the central part of the west front — which looks on downtown Washington — and replacing it with marble on a new line extending 44 to 88 feet farther out.

The additional space is earmarked for offices, restaurants and an underground service area. Construction would begin in about 18 months and take four years to complete.

Proxmire challenged the view that additional space is needed. He was among members of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee who questioned Capitol Architect J. George Stewart about the plan shortly after it was approved.

Stewart, also a member of the commission, told the subcommittee the proposed extension is the most economical way to shore up the wall. The extension will add about 4½ acres of

Crowds Urged To Jackson for End of 'March'

King Says Brando, Sinatra, Lancaster, Others to Entertain

ITTA BENA, Miss. (AP) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., shaking hands with people who contributed $1 bills to aid the Mississippi march, urged them to be in Jackson when the march ends there a week from today.

"If you can't join us on the march now, join us when we get to Jackson," he told a rally Friday night in Greenwood.

King promised there would be entertainment at the end of the march, including, he said, Frank Sinatra, Marlon Brando, Burt Lancaster, Sammy Davis Jr., Gregory Peck and rock 'n' roll singer James Brown.

"If you know these people you had better come and see them Saturday night," King said.

Several of the younger people chanted, "I'm going to catch a bus down there."

Troops, Riot Police Seal Off Saigon's Buddhist Institute

Mob Attacks Policemen, One Killed

SAIGON (AP) — The fatal shooting of a policeman and the beating of another by a Buddhist mob led troops and riot police to seal off Saigon's Buddhist Institute today, the wind-up of the first year of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military government.

The premier, smiling and relaxed at an anniversary garden party, declared the remnants of Buddhist opposition "represent no problem at all" to his regime.

"We are over the hump," he said.

Ky declared dissidence in the northern city of Hue will have to be cleaned up very soon, with violence avoided where possible. He described the recent agitation in Saigon as "nothing — just screaming little children led by a handful of monks and paid agitators."

"We will take care of that soon, too," he said.

Killed by Own Gun

The policeman was shot dead with his own gun by one man from an antigovernment mob. The other was attacked by a mob of about 150 persons. Some sources said he was dragged bleeding into the institute compound, others said he may have been released.

The police were said to have been given orders to shoot at the legs of persons trying to flee.

Ky Government Moves to Stop Inflation Ills

Drastic Measure Devaluates Money, Hikes State Salaries

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The government announced today sweeping economic measures, including a 50 per cent devaluation of the Vietnamese piaster and salary increases to 800,000 state employees.

The drastic measures, described as "major surgery for a serious disease," were aimed at halting the skyrocketing inflation threatening the economic life of this embattled nation.

They are expected to have strong influences on the country's unstable market and the government braced for a difficult period that may range from two to three months.

The United States has underwritten the program with the pledge of $160 million to help the regime cope with the situation.

Urban Areas Reeling

Hardest hit by the new measures will be the urban population, already reeling under the burden of the cost of living which rose 55 per cent in the past year.

The official rate of the Vietnamese piaster to the dollar, hitherto 60 to 1, was set at 118 to 1 for all exchanges, replacing a complicated three-standard system.

In effect, the new rate consists of 80 to 1 exchange plus a 38 piaster tax, for a total of 118 piasters.

In practice, this will mean that importers will have to pay about twice as much for their goods, and prices of all imported products will mount.

To alleviate, at least partially, the new blow to Vietnamese purses, the government promised salary increases ranging from 20 to 30 per cent to all its employees, including the armed forces and auxiliary units.

The plan is estimated to cost the government from 8 to 10 billion piasters or 20 per cent of the present national budget.

The plan was almost entirely worked out by the International Monetary Fund and was based on the successful devaluation in neighboring Laos in 1963.

In addition to the $160 million promised by the United States to underwrite the stability for, we did not achieve all of our marked $80 million.

Students' Loan Fund Doubled

MADISON (AP) — Gov. Warren P. Knowles signed into law Friday a bill doubling the state loan fund for college students.

The change hikes the cash in the fund to $20 million.

The loans are available to in-state students seeking a higher education at either public or private colleges and universities. The amount was raised to take advantage of a new federal program which pays the interest on the loans while the students are in school.

The bill placed the loan program under the State Commission on Higher Educational Aids. It was formerly administered by the Public Welfare Department.

Children of Airplane Crash Victims File $4 Million Lawsuit

CHICAGO (AP) — The British Overseas Airways Corp. and the Boeing Co. were named defendants Friday in a $4 million damage suit filed in behalf of five Milwaukee children whose parents died in an airplane crash in Japan.

Robert E. Lubbers, 39, and his wife, Margaret, 37, were among 39 vacationing appliance distributors and their wives who perished in the crash March 5. A total of 124 persons were killed in the accident.

The suit, filed in Circuit Court by the Lubbers' children's attorney, John J. Kennelly, accused BOAC of negligence and Boeing with failure to make the 707 jet liner strong enough to withstand weather conditions near Mt. Fuji.

Grand Jury Activities Hit by Snag

MADISON (AP) — A legal challenge as secret as the investigation that fostered it appeared today to have temporarily deferred additional indictments by a grand jury probing alleged violations of the state lobby law.

Three hours of deliberations Friday between a battery of attorneys and Circuit Judge Richard W. Bardwell signaled the turn and raised the possibility of State Supreme Court intervention in the long proceedings.

There were reports — but no confirmation — that the grand jury had asked for more indictments. Only one person has been charged to date in the 12-week probe.

The closed-door conferences came after the 17-member grand jury spent about 10 minutes in a locked courtroom with Bardwell.

Dist. Atty. Michael Torphy, who has directed the investigation since it began March 28, said only that the jury would reconvene Tuesday.

Romania Gets Chou's Pledge

Resistance to Russia 'Will Always Have' Support of China

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Red China's premier, encouraging Romanian Communists on the Soviet Union's doorstep to resist Soviet domination, holds more talks today with the independent-minded Romanians.

Radio Peking, monitored in Tokyo, said Chou En-lai assured the Romanians Friday that their wish not to be tied down to Moscow "will always have the firm support of the Chinese people."

On his arrival Thursday Chou praised Romania's refusal to take sides in the Soviet-Chinese ideological dispute.

The Romanians have carefully steered a neutral course in the dispute. They have also demanded that East European Communist states have a greater voice in decisions of the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact military alliance.

The Chinese premier met with Romanian leaders Friday for five hours at Communist party headquarters and for three more hours of informal discussion during lunch. Seated at the table with Chou was his deputy foreign minister, Chao Kuan-hua, an expert on Soviet and East European affairs.

Castro May Have Been Gagged By Aid-Weary Russian Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some theory that Moscow may have gagged Castro on persistent reports that the Soviet Union has found some of his recent activities very troublesome.

Earlier this year Castro engaged in a prolonged feud with Yugoslavia, a nation that has shown signs of independence from the Communist bloc. The Castro regime's outbursts against Yugoslavia came as the Kremlin appeared to be making a concerted effort to avoid further breaches among bloc nations in light of its continuing battle with Communist China.

Couple Adopting Child Who May be Missing Son

CHICAGO (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Chester Fronczak have begun proceedings to adopt the only child of 10,000 tested that the family says could possibly be the son kidnaped from Mrs. Fronczak's arms.

A spokesman for the family said the 2-year-old boy called Scott McKinley by New Jersey welfare officials was the only child of the 10,000 tested who could not be proven not to be Paul Joseph Fronczak. It was on this chance that the Fronczaks made their move toward legal adoption.

The Fronczak baby was kidnaped two days after birth April 27, 1964. A woman posing as a nurse took the infant from his mother at Michael Reese Hospital supposedly to be examined. Both the woman in white and the baby vanished.

Medical Tests

The blond child the Fronczaks now have was found July 1965. The boy they now call Paul Joseph was in a Trenton, N.J., orphanage until recently. The Fronczaks were not told of his existence until all possible medical tests to trace the child's heritage had been exhausted.

A spokesman for the family said some blood tests showed the boy may be Paul Joseph, but that other tests were inconclusive.

At a news conference Friday, Vernon Tittle and William O'Toole, lawyers for the Fronczaks, begged for privacy.

Terrell Near Peak for Bout Against Jones

HOUSTON (AP) — Ernie Terrell's trainer says the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion has nearly reached his peak in preparation for the June 28 title fight here with challenger Doug Jones.

In fact, Sam Solomon said after Terrell boxed three rounds Friday. "We're going to have to watch him closely and be very careful from now on."

"I'm going to let him box Saturday and Sunday," Solomon said. "But I'll probably box him off Monday and Tuesday."

Jones took the day off Friday after boxing four rounds Thursday and running his daily five-mile stretch.

Meanwhile, Texas Boxing Federation officials announced that the Tod Hering-Cleveland-Williams 10-round heavyweight bout will be shown on closed circuit television along with the 15-round title feature.

Previously only the Terrell-Jones match had been scheduled for closed circuit showings.

No Favorites in Road America June Sprints

Annual 160-Mile Feature to be Held At 'Elkhart' Sunday

ELKHART LAKE (AP) — With the absence of Texas oilman Jim Hall and his Chaparral, there are no clear-cut favorites for Sunday's 160-mile feature race at Road America's annual June sprints.

A year ago Hall's Chevrolet-powered Chaparral ran away from the field in the sprints feature. In September he returned for the Road America 500 and shared the driving in both of his Chaparrals for a 1-2 finish.

Seeking new fields to conquer, Hall has turned to racing on the Grand Prix circuit and will be in Europe this weekend.

Seven races will be run at Road America, three today and four Sunday. A record field of 296 cars is entered.

Top entries include Ralph Salver of Hammond, Ind., the 1964 winner, Charlie Hayes of Rockville, Md., John Cannon of Pasadena, Calif., and Jerry Hansen of Minneapolis, Minn.

Production cars of classes D and E will open the program today with a 60-mile race. Today's feature will be a 100-mile race for A, B and C production cars.

There will be another 60-mile race today and two more 60-mile runs Sunday before the 160-mile main event.

Bosox Option Pitcher To Toronto of IL to Make Room for Kasko

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox have optioned right-handed pitcher Jerry Stephenson to Toronto of the International League.

The 22-year-old Stephenson, who has been unimpressive with a 2-5 record and a 5.86 earned run average this season, was sent down Friday night to make room for infielder Eddie Kasko, who had been on the disabled list because of a back ailment.

first round which ends a week from today, will send Jerry Nyman to the mound tonight in the middle game of a 3-meeting series with the Cards. "Downtown Retail Merchants Night," featuring many prizes for fans, will be observed.

The fourth inning, last night, was a showcase for many of the ingredients that have contributed to the Foxes' success in 1966: clutch hitting, bench strength and the right moves by manager Stan Wasiak.

The Cards' Mike Buis breezing along with a 3-0 lead, retired Bill Melton and Al Fitzmorris in the fourth. Jay Petersen then belted a double along the left field line. Jim Jedelsky drew a walk. Bob Von Eps also walked to fill the bases.

Wasiak decided to take Steve Kokor out for a pinch batter despite the fact that the tall right hander had struck out seven and allowed only three hits in his four innings. Adams' was Wasiak's choice, and Doug drilled one through the box into center field to score the first two Foxes runs.

Kristowski Singles

A passed ball sent both Von Eps and Adams into scoring position. Al Kristowski, a nifty leadoffman, then came on strong as an RBI man. He smashed a single to center to score the tying and go-ahead runs.

That proved to be all the runs the Foxes could manufacture but it also proved to be enough in view of Schaefer's strong arm relieving.

Schaefer permitted but three base runners in the final five innings — on a single, a walk and an error — and faced only 16 batters, one over the minimum. One of the runners was erased in a double play and another Bob Cox was cut down by Von Eps on an attempted steal. Schaefer struck out six.

The left hander's already low earned run average was cut to a microscopic rate of 1.15 for 39 innings.

Roger Robinson started the Cardinal scoring in the second when he swatted a 1-out homer over the right field wall. Cedar Rapids added two in the fourth.

Joe Arcia singled to left and Joe Hague was safe on Kristowski's error. Bill Bracy sacrificed them to second and third. Robinson was walked intentionally to fill the bases. Harry Lanois's sacrifice fly and John Spin's single produced the runs.

Rives McBee Steals Show With 9 Birdies in Record-Tying Tour

By JACK STEVENSON
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 66th U.S. Open Golf Tournament developed today into a match of the brute strength of a resurging Arnold Palmer and the finesse of Billy Casper.

Deadlocked at 137 going into the third round, they led an assault on the tight Olympic Club record for this 71-year-old tournament. McBee's card showed nine birdies.

Casper carded a 68 to go with his opening 69 on a course where only five rounds lower than par 70 were shot during the full 72 holes of the 1955 Open.

"Scrambling Round" I'd say you'd have to classify this as a scrambling round," said Casper who won the title in 1959.

McCovey's Home Run Boosts Giants Over LA; Pirates Nip Braves, 4-2

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie McCovey still has his home run touch, but Gaylord Perry finally has lost his Perry was locked in a duel with Don Sutton until the Giants got a break in the eighth when, with one out, third baseman Jim Lefebvre fumbled a grounder by Tito Fuentes. One out later, Willie Mays walked and McCovey followed with his homer. That tagged Sutton, who allowed only five hits with his fifth loss against seven victories.

The Giants scored their first run in the third inning on a single by Fuentes and Mays, doubling McCovey's lead.

Perry, completing his first game since an ankle injury three weeks ago, brought his record to 8-1—the best in the major leagues on a percentage basis. And the big reason for his amazing flip flop from last year's 8-12 record is his home run record.

The 27-year-old right hander who never has won more than 12 games in his career, has not allowed a homer in 11 games this season. Last year he was tagged at a one-homer every three game clip and surrendered a total of 21.

McCovey meanwhile brought his homer total to 14 and combined with Perry to build the Giants' winning streak to six and their NL lead to 3½ games over Pittsburgh and four over the defending champion Dodgers.

Error Gives Nats Extra-Inning Victory Over Cleveland, 5-4

Robinsons Blast Homers in Oriole Win; Stottlemyre Hurls 5-Hitter

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Although Pedro Gonzalez didn't do too well in the Cleveland Indians' four-man infield, he was flawless in their four-man outfield.

Gonzales, normally an infielder, made an error while playing second base that gave Washington an 11-inning, 5-4 victory over Cleveland Friday night.

The miscue came on Jim King's grounder with the bases loaded in the 11th and the game tied 4-4. Gonzalez scooped up in their half of the inning on the grounder and fired to the Fred Valentine's run-scoring plate. But the throw was low, single, and Bob Saverine trotted across with the winning run.

However, if the throw had been accurate, the next Senator batter would have been Frank Howard. And since Howard was the reason for the four-man outfield, when King grounded to second, perhaps Gonzalez was busy wondering whether he would make another trip to right-center.

Moves to Outfield
Gonzalez traveled out there in the ninth inning when Howard came to bat with two out and the game tied. Center fielder Vic Davallillo moved toward left-center while left fielder Chuck Hinton played close to the left field line.

Shortstop Chico Salmon moved very close to third baseman Max Alvis, leaving an extremely huge gap between short and first.

Indians' Manager Birdie Tebbets employed the shift, hoping to hold the mammoth slugger to a single.

"This is a big ball park," Tebbets said of D.C. Stadium, "and he's been hitting us very good. If I only overshift in the infield, he might get a double and be in scoring position. I put in the fourth outfielder, and I take away that double."

"I saw them overshift in the infield against Ted Williams, and he got a lot of doubles."

Howard didn't get a double. He didn't even get a single. He grounded to shortstop Salmon who threw him out.

Gonzalez resumed his normal position the next inning, and he was still there in the 11th.

He probably wishes he wasn't.

In other American League games, Baltimore beat Boston 5-3, New York defeated Detroit 5-2, Chicago topped Minnesota 3-1 and California trimmed Kansas City 4-2.

Before King's winning grounder, the Senators loaded the bases on Saverine's double, a walk to Ken Hamlin and Ken McCullen's single. Salmon put the Indians ahead 4-3 with a two-run homer in the eighth, but the Senators tied it in their half of the inning on the Fred Valentine's run-scoring plate. But the throw was low, single, and Bob Saverine trotted across with the winning run.

Brooks Robinson hit a three-run homer and Frank Robinson connected with one on, giving the Senators Baltimore's Steve Barber enough support for his sixth victory in eight decisions. Don De-meter and Carl Yazstrzemiiski homered for Boston.

Pitches 5-Hitter
Mel Stottlemyre pitched a five-hitter, while Bobby Richardson led New York's attack when he singled, stole second with three hits, Richardson singled and scored in the Yankees' winning run in the ninth at Kaline hit a John Callison had been thrown two-run homer for Detroit in the out at the plate trying to score from second on Allen's single.

Chicago beat Minnesota for the first time this season behind Tommy John's six-hitter, the first game for the Mets. Fourth-inning singles by the Buford, Tom McCraw, Floydnightcap with a bases-loaded Robinson and Lee Elia account for two runs and helped stop the Twins' eight-game winning streak over the White Sox.

Willie Smith's two-run homer in the California seventh, snapped a 2-2 tie between the Angels and Kansas City. Relief Jack Sanford picked up his seventh victory in nine decisions won it on Ron Hunt's two-run home the Athletics' two runs in the second, as many starts for the Mets.

Knowles Cites Problems in Aid Programs

ment study being conducted on urban problems in the state, the transfer of the state unit of the Office for Economic Opportunity to the governor's office for greater executive contact, and conferences and publications designed to help local officials seeking federal aid funds.

In a special session devoted to federal aids to local and state transportation systems, state aeronautics commission director Thomas K. Jordan warned the local officials that any requests for federal aid for the construction or improvement of general aviation airports in the next three or four years would have to be "very well justified," or face a fund refusal.

Aid For Airports

The state can expect to receive only about five to six million dollars for all of its airport projects from the federal government in that period, he said, and therefore priorities will have to be established. He said the state needs at least $12 million.

Leading the list he proposed were air carrier airports regularly serviced by airline companies.

Second, he suggested, would be airports designed to reduce the general aviation traffic or air carrier airports. These smaller facilities would draw much of the smaller air traffic away from the larger metropolitan airports, he suggested.

And placing third were those airports scheduled for third level air service of an interstate nature, such as now operate at Wisconsin Rapids, Marshfield, and Appleton.

Last on his priority list were the general aviation airports which handle only business, industrial, and private air traffic.

comfortable to read, and white space has a lot to do with that."

Taylor admits that newspaper design is difficult, because of the deadline schedules that must be adhered to by editorial personnel.

"One of the best newspaper magazines is the New York Herald-Tribune's New York, a Sunday supplement. The designer has solved all of the problems and situations beautifully."

A Sunday supplement, he holds, should "look like a magazine, rather than a small, cut-down newspaper."

Fortunately for all concerned, if a given design or experimental display doesn't work out, "there's always next week. You should always look to the future. The designer and editors should keep improving every issue, and never look back."

Reason For Redesigns

The two basic purposes of his redesign of the two Post-Crescent supplements were:

1. To achieve a "sameness" to the magazine, so that each issue looks basically alike, and

2. To help editors with layout, so that the contents are more or less "mapped out" for them on a systematic basis.

The latter point was particularly important with VIEW, since it offers on a weekly basis some 12 regular columns and features. Achieving uniformity and clarity of design in their presentation, was a principal goal.

"If your magazine is comfortable to the reader, if it doesn't fight him or shoo him away—he'll sit down and read it," Taylor declared.

Works in Chicago

A graduate of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, Taylor worked for a Chicago advertising studio for three years while he was a student.

It was at the Chicago advertising studio that he mastered the fundamentals of working with typography, and gained practical experience with advertising art and copy.

From Chicago he moved to Des Moines and Cowles Publications, Inc., where he was employed designing direct mail solicitations for the circulation department of Look magazine.

After four years with Look, where, incidentally, he met his wife, Marilyn, he came to Appleton and Creative Group, Inc., where he is type director and graphic designer.

As for the future of newspaper and magazine display, Taylor believes that the New York Herald-Tribune is leading the way by offering a specially designed first page of each Sunday section. He also likes the six-column, rather than eight-column, newspaper page, and calls the six-column width "very readable."

I have gone along with Lois out of my mind because I haven't wanted her to feel different from the rest of the girls in her crowd. But things have gotten out of hand. The girl is getting herself up to look like a comic, I feel I must draw the line somewhere—but where?

Lois has hemmed up all her dresses so that they hit her about four inches above the knees. She wants everything tight around the hips and the fender the colors and patterns the better.

She goes around both day and night wearing sunglasses, as said the state needs at least $12 million (which she irons on a board) hangs in her eyes and looks ghastly. I am happy that she is allergic to eye make-up and cannot wear it. For several months last winter she looked like a raccoon.

My husband and I have had some serious talks about what to do but we just don't know where to draw the line. Will you please print this letter not only for us but for other parents who must be equally baffled? — Adrift Without Answers

Dear Adrift: Styles do change—and they will continue to change because it's good for morale and good for business. But some of the stuff I've seen lately—not only on teen-agers, but on their mothers—may be considered fashionable, but it strikes me as positively indecent.

The op look and the pop look and the ironed hair and the kooky glasses—o.k., if a girl keeps herself clean. But those skin-tight, thigh-high skirts are vulgar. There's nothing left for a girl to do attract attention except to set her hair on fire.

Parents not only have the right but they have an obligation to say, "This far—and no further!" There comes a point at which respectability must take precedence over "trend"—and, so help me, over "what everybody else in the crowd is doing." When you feel that your teen-ager is getting too far out, step in and lower the boom.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was 18 when I fell madly in love with a married man. I waited for him three years, until he could get a divorce.

We have been married 14

Waupaca DPW Orders Paper Taken to Dump Must be Bundled, Tied

New Ruling Attempts to Reduce Amount Of Refuse Blowing Into Cemetery, Lake

WAUPACA — Enforced bundling and tying of all paper taken to the city dump will go into effect July 1, Director of Public Works Ivan Oerter has ordered.

Oerter said the new ruling is an attempt to reduce the amount of paper blowing from the city dump into adjacent Waupaca Cemetery and Shadow Lake.

It applies to all paper, he emphasized, regardless of whether it is hauled by an individual or contract hauler. Oerter asked that persons begin cooperating with the order immediately.

He also requested that anyone taking garbage to the dump not ignite it after unloading, because this leads to an uncontrolled burning situation.

Another Appeal

Cemetery board members recently made another appeal to the city to correct the unsightly condition at the cemetery caused by blowing paper from the dump.

Cemetery officials favor the construction of a fence between the dump and their land to catch the paper, but have refused to pay for the installation.

Oerter feels a fence will not correct the situation. He said a controlled sanitary land fill program at the dump would eliminate the blowing paper and smoke.

New Tractor

The city is waiting the delivery of a new tractor which could be used for a sanitary land fill program. He said the present tractor being used at the dump is not large enough to attempt such an operation.

Plans to purchase the new tractor were made when the city was contemplating moving the dump to a new site on the north side of the city, where a land fill program would have been used.

Moving the dump was turned down by voters in an April referendum.

Moving Dump

Mayor Lloyd Matheson has charged that if the cemetery board members would have given their support to moving the dump they would not be faced with the current problem.

Forced by the vote to use the present dump, city officials are discussing various ways of upgrading the operation to eliminate the blowing of paper and debris.

The type of operation to be used is still undecided, Oerter said. It will either be a sanitary land fill, which he has recommended, or a controlled burning disposal program.

Post-Crescent Magazines

Adman Restyles 'View,' Plans New 'Showtime'

A veteran type director and graphic arts designer, with strong ideas about how daily and weekly publications should be styled, is responsible for the "new look" VIEW and Showtime magazines to be introduced with Sunday's Post-Crescent.

Pat Taylor, 59 Bellaire Ct., has been associated as a typographer with Creative Group, Inc., Appleton advertising agency, since 1960. His hobby, as well as his profession, is the effective design of publications, and he is a close student of such masters of magazine layout as Henry Wolf of Show, and Otto Storch, of McCall's.

"Quiet Elegance" in "Typography" magazines should always be second to the content of the magazine," Taylor is convinced. "The keynote now is quietness of design, not shouting. The 'poster look' is old hat, passé."

In designing the new cover and interior formats for Showtime and VIEW, Taylor tried to achieve what he describes as "quiet elegance." The basic design of a newspaper magazine must be accurate, in its fundamentals, he notes, "so that stories and articles can come forth without any confusion on the reader's part."

In order to achieve a separate personality for each magazine, Taylor chose Times Roman Bold type for column headings and mastheads in VIEW, and News Gothic Bold type for Showtime.

Deadline Problems

"Both are very clean, modern faces — easy to read," in his opinion. "Also, the use of white space in magazines nowadays is handled well. It may look wasted for the layman, but it is

Gov. Knowles Cites Need to Prevent Red Tape in Aid

Governor Explains State's Role In Solving Urban Problems

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — An extension of "creative federalism" is needed to prevent the growing federal aid programs in use throughout the country from bogging down in Wisconsin, Gov. Warren P. Knowles said Friday.

He said that the federal government must be considered "a giant creative machine, a senior planning partner, the source of dollars for a massive partnership assault" on the problems facing the state and country.

But, he said, there must be maximum participation and control by local and state units of government working within basic guidelines to insure that local problems are met and solved.

Problems Too Widespread

"The federal government, for all its national concern, cannot properly respond to the pre-eminent need of regional diversity, and local government. It cannot assume regional responsibility, nor be expected to solve every local problem. The problems are too widespread, too localized; and Washington — too far away."

He spoke to more than 150 state, county, town and local officials gathered for the Governor's Conference on Federal Aids to Cities, Towns and Villages in the state capitol. Knowles called for a systematic approach to state assistance in securing federal aids for localities.

"In too many states we have seen massive confusion and red tape associated with all federal aid programs. Top heavy administration from Washington and sluggish state action has bogged programs down with a considerable amount of waste," he explained.

Important Role

Knowles said that the state government must play an important role in the governmental chain of "local, state and federal links."

"We realize that the urban sprawl of Milwaukee, Green Bay, Appleton, Racine, Kenosha, and any other city may be our own problem."

"We recognize that problems like our community's air or water pollution also involves our air and our water. You can't contaminate the water at its source or your neighbors' air without sharing the adverse effects."

"We realize that we are not doing our fair share if we fail to provide the necessary assistance to your branches of government," Knowles said.

Outlines Steps

He outlined recently approved steps that in the future will provide greater coordination between localities seeking aid and the state which has a voice in the approval of most aid projects to local communities.

Included are a new federal aid unit in the state Department of Administration, a state Department of Resource Development.

State Democrats on Viet Nam

The shambles which was the consideration of the nation's Viet Nam policy by the state Democratic convention last weekend has contributed little toward making clear either reponsible alternatives in foreign policy or in clearly stating the position of the state party's membership. The convention's action can only be regarded as additional evidence of the nation's uncertainty on what to do next in Viet Nam.

The convention record will show that state Democrats stand for a cease fire, the opening of direct negotiations with all political and military forces involved in Viet Nam, including the Viet Cong, and for elections to be carried out as promised by General Ky under the supervision of the United Nations or the nations which were parties to the 1954 Geneva Accords. The record also will show that, while President Johnson was commended for his efforts to bring peace in Viet Nam, the President was asked to "pursue those efforts with renewed vigor."

But what the convention record will not show is that the adopted resolution came at a banquet attended by about only 400 of the 1,500 party members who attended the main convention sessions. For whatever their reasons, convention managers did not allow a compromise resolution on the controversial Viet Nam subject to come before the convention until a few minutes before the hall had to be emptied under terms of a rental contract.

The resolution, while it never came to a roll call, more clearly represented the difficulties faced by the United States in Viet Nam and the responsibility which falls to the political party conducting policy for Viet Nam. It contained related points to those adopted by the smaller meeting and two paragraphs of commendation for the President for making clear the United States has no power ambitions in Viet Nam, and that we will withdraw once peace is restored, and for using restraint "thereby lessening the possibility of war with China."

Rep. Clement Zablocki of Milwaukee, a ranking Democrat on the House Foreign Relations Committee, pleaded for adoption of the resolution as a demonstration of support for the President. More meaningful, Zablocki noted that the resolution, like the one adopted by the smaller meeting, contained provisions which the United States was powerless to institute.

Zablocki's point needs emphasis. Most Americans will agree with a desire for a cease fire, for negotiations leading to a stable government, and for South Viet Nam elections supervised by the United Nations as a means of introducing international responsibility into Viet Nam. But stating desires is one thing. Suggesting methods is more important. A cease fire means an end to shooting and military infiltration by both sides. Both sides must agree to negotiate. And the United Nations, despite the recent request of South Viet Nam, has shown no indication that it believes there is an international peacemaking role in Viet Nam. Any such step faces a veto by Russia or France.

Before their convention, state Democrats criticized the resolution of the state Republican convention saying only that "the United States should use every appropriate means to end the war in Viet Nam without surrendering the freedom of the Vietnamese." The record of the Democratic state convention is more wordy, but nothing new in alternatives in Viet Nam policy which are possible to achieve was contributed.

BY ELIAS ANTAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The middle Eastern pressure cooker is on the burner again. Boiling point may be reached this summer in a confrontation between Egypt's President Nasser and King Feisal of Saudi Arabia. That would be certain to raise tension between Washington and Moscow.

The differences between Nasser and Feisal are gradually shaking down the Middle East into revolutionary and conservative camps and come at a time when the Soviet Union appears to have launched a new diplomatic offensive in the region.

The recent visit to Egypt by Soviet Premier Alexi Kosygin was apparently aimed at bringing Nasser closer to the Soviet bloc.

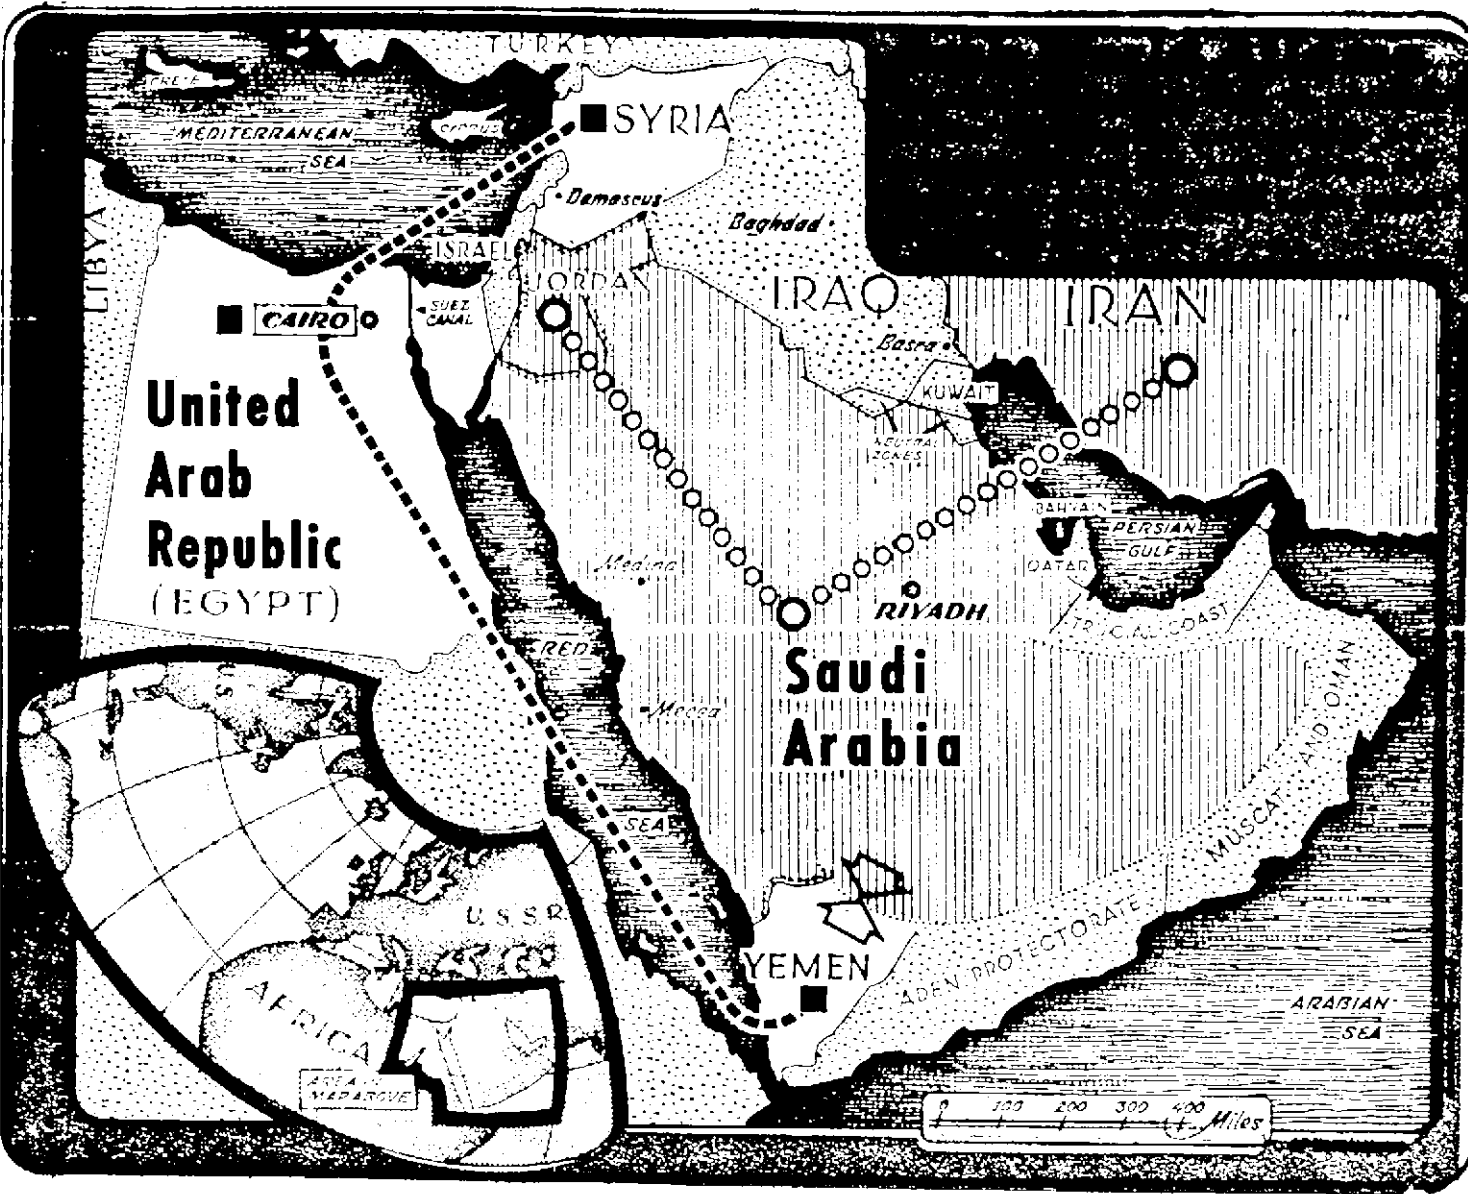

The U.S. State Department has publicly stated that America is committed to the defense of Saudi Arabia against aggression. The statement was made after Nasser threatened he could occupy Saudi border towns "if they continue to be used as bases for attacks on Yemen."

WAR IN YEMEN The feud between the two Arab leaders — one a revolutionary socialist and the other a conservative rightist — picked up steam over the unsolved question of the war in Yemen.

At the same time, Feisal has made a bid to group together conservative regimes and bolster his position in the Arabian Peninsula. His call has received its best reception in Iran and in Jordan, where the government of King Hussein recently arrested about 125 socialists and communists.

Cairo charged Feisal's move was "backed by imperialism and reaction" and said the "Islamic Alliance" — as the Arab Nationalist Press called it — was doomed to failure.

Feisal denied the existence of plans for an alliance, but Saudi Arabia nevertheless has toned up its military muscle by purchasing a $300 million air defense system from Britain and America.

Jordan also has received American tanks and jet fighters, including about 35 F104 Starfighters.

As the tension mounted between Cairo and Riyadh, it became evident that Feisal's main fear was that Nasser would hang on to his throne in Yemen until Britain pulled out of the South Arabia Federation in 1968.

Egypt already supports a terrorist organization operating against the British in the Federation, and with a broader base than Yemen provides, could pose a real threat to Saudi Arabia.

President Nasser partly substantiated Saudi fears at a press conference recently when he said the dispute was "not merely over Yemen but over the whole Arabian peninsula. Saudi Arabia wants that future under a feudal system dominated by colonial powers."

REDS WOO ARABS

At this heated juncture in Arab politics, the Soviet Union has begun new moves to win Arab support and made its opening gambit in Syria, the most perennially isolated country in the Middle East.

Kosygin signed a economic agreement in April with a visiting Syrian delegation in Moscow and it provides, in part, for Soviet assistance worth $150 million in financing the construction of a dam in Syria.

The leftist regime in Damascus, although latently hostile to Cairo, is currently waging radio attacks against Jordan for alleged troop concentrations on its border.

At a banquet while he was in Cairo, Kosygin listened as Nasser explained that the Islamic alliance was threatening the Yemeni revolution and then said Egypt could always depend on the assistance of the Soviet Union "in its efforts at political, social and economic progress."

The visit of the Soviet premier, whose schedule allowed plenty of time for quiet, closed-door discussions, came at a time when Egyptian relations with Washington are taking a downturn. Nasser was angered at America's support for Feisal and at subsequent reports from Washington that Egyptian requests for U.S. food and technical aid had been shelved.

"The U.A.R. is not ready to accept any American threats and has stood firmly in the past in face of all political and economic pressure," said the semi-official Cairo daily, Al Ahram.

An announcement from Washington that Feisal would visit President Johnson in June could hardly have relieved Cairo's angry mood.

Who Was Convicted, Weber or the Nation?

The case of Private Adam Weber Jr., found guilty by an Army courtmartial of having willfully disobeyed orders, is an unfortunate one. Quite obviously officers of the United States Army were not happy about prosecuting Weber and his sentence was a light one compared to what is permitted on such a charge. But the whole matter emphasizes the difficulties today in fighting a war.

Weber refused to accept his assigned rifle after he was sent to Viet Nam because he stated simply that he could not kill anyone and had repeatedly told military authorities so. But he did not come under the official designation of a conscientious objector because he wouldn't say that his refusal came about because of "religious training or belief." A former seminary student for the Roman Catholic priesthood, Weber had also refused to sign an oath of allegiance because of the clause that he would then promise to "obey . . . the orders of the officers appointed over me" and military authorities said he then could not be assigned to a noncombatant's job which required security clearance.

However, in answer to questions from the court, Weber said that he was quite willing to serve his country in Viet Nam and in the front lines as a medical corpsman "as long as I didn't have to carry a weapon."

It is ridiculous that a man of apparently very high principles such as Private Weber should be prosecuted and sentenced when the draft dodgers, the prevaricators, the sneaks avoid military service or use it for their own purposes. Weber's major error, apparently, was that he told the truth and refused to use a religious belief to excuse what he felt to be an individual matter. Last fall he wrote a rather careful explanation of how he felt. "I believe that I am at least as loyal to the United States and what it stands for as the most loyal of its sons, but a man's first duty is to his soul and conscience, and right now I cannot in all conscience take the life of another human being, especially in reference to the war in Viet Nam. It is a futile and fruitless war, as are all wars. I want very much to serve my country. I do now and will continue to serve my country by trying to make it a better place to live and love. I have hopes of service in the Army in some function of nurturing or preserving life."

There is no sign that Weber sought publicity to make his stand clear. In fact he turned down civilian legal assistance at his trial because he said he didn't want it to become a "circus." And while anyone who insists upon taking a firm position, contrary to established regulations, must bear the primary weight of being alone, it is clear that Private Weber was not really the one convicted at his trial.

The United States is in a war, limited for the time being as it may be. Obviously everyone cannot decide for himself whether or not he will contribute to fighting that war. In a world where brutality must still be contained by force, the true pacifist would be overrun in a short time if it were not for that force.

The Army simply was not organized for the "function of nurturing or preserving life."

But in denying that a man's conscience shall be his guide, the nation stands convicted of forgetting what we are supposed to be fighting for. How can we guarantee the right of the South Vietnamese to free elections when we cannot even uphold the right of one American not to kill?

Lucy-Carley Fight Could Prove Divisive for Democratic Party

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — The Democratic state convention has confirmed what the naked eye of the Democratic organization politician or the attentive outside observer could have concluded earlier — that the competition for the Democratic nomination for the governorship is likely to be more nominal than real.

Wyngaard

On the face of it, the fielding of four candidates by the party is unusual, and especially in a season when most of the experienced Democrats feel that it will be difficult to dislodge the Republican administration on its record in the November balloting.

Yet it has become more clear that two of the candidates for the nomination, whatever their own hopes may lead them to believe, will not be significant contenders. The fight for the top place on the ticket and the control of the state party organization is between Lt. Gov. Patrick J. Lucey and National Committeeman David Carley.

It is an axiom in politics that once the desire to run for high office overcomes the politician, it is difficult for him to perceive the realities of his situation or to hear the admonitions of his more clear-eyed friends.

Thus everybody in the hall at the Democratic rally noted the thin and perfunctory response to the speeches of Dominic Frinzi and Abe Swed as they explained why they were running for the state's highest office and what they propose to do in the unlikely event that they win it in the fall. But the chances are that they didn't notice. Frinzi is exhilarated by the memory of his substantial vote in the primary two years ago. He is unwilling to acknowledge that his competitive situation this year is entirely different.

Swed's motivation can only be speculated upon, but it is probably the result of his long observation of the success of other politicians in the pursuit of high office and his passionate if quixotic devotion to his favorite taxation theory. Swed believes that a flat business transactions tax will resolve all of the state's fiscal worries, although in months of plugging for his favorite scheme he has not yet raised the slightest ripple of interest or support, in either party, or among citizens generally.

CARLEY-LUCEY

The Carley and Lucey positions are different. In the front-runner, or as the saying goes, he is the man to beat. Yet Carley manifestly believes that whatever lead his rival has can be overcome, with some lucky breaks. Lucey, for his part, is taking no chances. He is prepared for the utmost exertion in campaigning and has spent a year in painstaking building of a campaign machine.

One of the difficulties of their positions is that Republican Gov. Knowles has left relatively little in the way of issues, after his first term legislative record, with which the Democratic candidates can attract widespread attention. Another of the hazards of their roles is an obvious personality conflict between them that was exposed for all to see in their hostile references to each other in their convention keynote speeches. Carley accused Lucey, in effect, of supporting the principal objectives of the Republican governor. Lucey responded in kind by accusing his youthful competitor of exploiting the "misery" of American troops in Viet Nam for his own local political interest.

Democrats generally are more successful than Republicans in bandaging the wounds of intraparty fights in primary campaigns. But with the manifest dislikes and distrusts of these men for each other and with many more weeks of their fight remaining, there are some Democrats worrying about the effect of their factionalism upon the effort against the Republicans in November.

Letters From School Appreciated by Sailor

Editor, Post-Crescent:

About three days ago I received a large envelope containing forty-five letters written by the fourth graders of Pius X elementary school. Needless to say, I thoroughly enjoyed each and every one of them and they considerably brightened my day and entire outlook.

Although I would prefer to answer each letter individually, return addresses were not included, and time will not allow it.

"I'm sure the school is closed for summer vacation; therefore, your paper leaves me the only timely alternative for expressing my gratitude for their consideration. I would appreciate your publishing my thanks if space in your newspaper will allow."

Lawmakers Put Knowles On Spot With Pay Raise

Editor, Post-Crescent:

Just about the time one begins to feel that the current group of state legislators is really doing a good job in Madison, they completely reverse this opinion by voting themselves a pay increase which would nearly double most of their salaries. This is a bold faced political move timed so as to slip through quickly and as quietly as possible just at a time when the governor is on the spot with other important pending legislation. So he, the governor, almost cannot veto it if he hopes to get several of his programs through. Three of these pet bills are still bottled up in the legislature, highways, pollution and highway safety, so if the governor vetoes the pay raise bill, the legislature almost certainly will let those important measures die when they adjourn.

In The Post-Crescent's editorial supporting the additional pay, you note that these lawmakers are underpaid. But so are our teachers, our clergy, and many other well educated and prominent groups of people. When the state employees asked for a pay raise recently, they received one, but it was cut back by our legislators to be about a 3 per cent increase. Now this same group of legislators is asking support of their double pay legislation.

One of the criteria set up of late by the federal government to help control inflation is a yardstick to measure if proposed wage increases are inflationary. The acceptable limits are approximately a 3 to 4 per cent increase at one time. Now most of our legislators will be running for reelection soon and one of the cries we'll hear is that runaway inflation is giving us all less spendable income. Apparently they feel that controlling everyone else's pay is necessary but somehow they should be the exception.

Again let me say I too feel that they are underpaid; perhaps grossly underpaid. However why didn't they grant themselves reasonable increases over a period of years. This could be done in one bill if it was deemed advisable. But this current bipartisan attempt to nearly double their own salaries at a most strategic time can only be labeled as a very thinly veiled effort to put one over on all of us, especially the governor.

Appleton's Police Are Courteous

Editor, Post-Crescent:

I was interested in your article about police pay scales. I used to live in Appleton and we moved to Green Bay. But we still come back to shop in Appleton for two reasons. I like the shops and the policemen are always so helpful and courteous. My husband wanted to apply to the police department for a job but I said, "No thanks. You'd either have to get two jobs for us to get along or I'd have to get a job and I don't want to leave my kids yet. So forget it." But anyway we appreciate them. Why aren't they paid enough, anyway?

"If we can die in Viet Nam, we can die in Mississippi," Williams said. "I'm sorry I don't have but one life to give for this damnable place, Mississippi."

Said King: "You all know as well as I do an individual takes his life in his own hands when he asserts his rights in Mississippi."

During Friday's march, the demonstrators encountered children waving Confederate flags and a sound truck blaring a Ku Klux Klan song. A white man doused them with a hose and a poisonous snake was found in a truck carrying newsmen along the march route.

King has said he expects 25,000 people in Jackson June 26 for a final march on the state capitol.

Less than 500 people, half the number of the night before, heard King as he spoke before tents set up in Broad Street Park.

Cernan's walk in space had to be cut a half hour short because his faceplate fogged so badly that he could not even see himself in a mirror attached to the rear of the spacecraft.

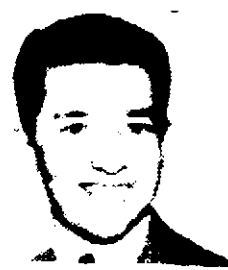

The new champion space walker said the trouble developed as strolling in orbit proved to be more work than anticipated and his suit's ventilation system was not adequate to remove body moisture.

Cernan also discovered difficulty in maneuvering with a 25-foot umbilical cord feeding him oxygen from the spacecraft. The cord kept getting in the way, he said.

Seamans said that results of the investigation into upcoming flights could lead to some changes in original mission objectives. He noted that Aldrin might take his space walk with a rocket pack on his back without a tether line attaching him to the spacecraft as a precaution.

For two weeks prior to coming to Appleton he traveled throughout the Midwest with the Revivaltime Choir, of which he's been a member for the past two years.

A special welcoming service, sponsored by the youth organization of the church, Christ's Ambassadors, was held Thursday.

space and increase the size of the Capitol by 25 per cent, he said.

"Inadequate Advice"

Proxmire said the project should be given "the most searching and critical scrutiny," adding that "if Congress proceeds on this pitifully inadequate advice, it will deserve the ringing public denunciation for waste and extravagance this proposal is sure to bring."

"If there is anything the nation does not need, it is additional restaurant facilities at the Capitol. The Senate and House restaurants are already notorious money losers," he said.

A new marble floor was put on the east front of the Capitol five years ago, although many historians, preservationists and the American Institute of Architects objected.

The west front was begun shortly after the British burned the building in 1814. It was completed in 1826. If constructed, the new front will replace the last of the original exterior of the building.

John Leitner Found Dead At St. John

ST. JOHN — John Leitner, 83, was found dead in his home here about 8:30 p.m. Friday by his two sons.

According to Calumet County Coroner Leroy Hughes, Leitner suffered a stroke after he had arisen Friday morning. Leitner collapsed to the kitchen floor, striking his head on a table as he had a cut on the head.

Hughes said Leitner probably lived for several hours after suffering the stroke.

Leitner's sons, Clarence and Bud, broke into the home last night when they saw him lying on the floor. Kapitzke Funeral Home, Hibert, is in charge of arrangements.

from the compound, where the man who shot the policeman was said to have fled.

In the war against the Viet Cong, American B52 bombers rounded out one year of raids against Communist targets in Viet Nam and marked the anniversary with two big attacks against the Communist guerrillas.

Ground fighting dwindled to only minor allied contact with the Viet Cong.

One wave of the Guam-based B52s hit a Viet Cong troop concentration 35 miles southwest of Da Nang.

Near Cambodia

Another formation of the eight-engine bombers hammered two Viet Cong base camps 75 miles northwest of Saigon. The target area was in War Zone C near the Cambodian border, long a Communist troop stronghold.

Police officials reported that a 16-year-old Buddhist girl, who set herself afire in an antigovernment protest Friday night, died today.

The girl, Dao Thi Tuyet, set her clothing ablaze in the compound of the Buddhist Institute. Her death brought to 10 the number of self-immolations since May 29.

The policeman was shot to death with his own revolver and a police captain said the man who did it was seen running into the institute. Police were demanding that monks hand him over.

The captain, Phan Huu Tran, said police knew the slayer. Plainclothesmen seized four persons, one of them wearing monk's robes, and took them away in a truck. One resisted and policemen were seen beating him with rifle butts.

On Way to Work

Police said the slain policeman was on his way to work when he was attacked. He lived in the area.

Although the institute, about two miles from downtown Saigon, has been the center of agitation against the government of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, no monks in robes were seen in the crowd that attacked the policeman.

The institute's gates were closed and about 200 persons milled about inside.

Earlier, the crowd which had been on the street all day, burned an American Jeep.

As the antigovernment rioting went into its sixth straight day, the regime announced that the curfew in the capital will be shortened by three hours today and Sunday to permit observances of Armed Forces Day.

A big parade of all branches of the South Vietnamese and allied forces is scheduled for Sunday. Air force units also will fly over the city.

The holiday will also mark the first anniversary of the military who did it was seen running into government of Premier Ky.

Warner Studio Signs French-Italian Actress

Catherine Spaak, Daughter of Playwright, Starts 5-Year Movie Contract in 'Hotel'

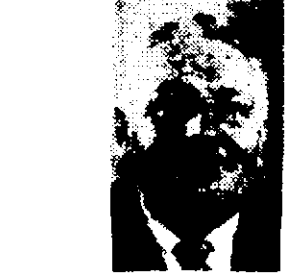

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "My father is Belgian, I was born in France, and now I live in Italy," says Catherine Spaak. "People don't know what I am." Chances are, they will. The blonde, willowy actress may well be the next international star in the tradition of Gina Lollobrigida, Sophia Loren and Claudia Cardinale, all of whom are her friends.
Such are the hopes of Warner Bros., which has signed Miss Spaak for a film a year for five years, starting with "Hotel." She plays "the enigmatic French mistress of an unscrupulous businessman" (Kevin McCarthy) in the film version of the best-selling novel.
Miss Spaak continued in French films through her teens, later switched to Italy, where she married Fabrizio Capucci and became the mother of a girl, now 3. The actress is now separated; an Italian millionaire is reportedly the current interest in her life.
She is best known to American audiences by "The Empty Canvas," which was notable for a scene she played with Bette Davis. Miss Spaak was reclining in bed covered only by a few pieces of paper currency.
She remains clothed in "Hotel," and strikingly so; ace designer Edith Head created the field: as premier and minister of foreign affairs for Belgium. Miss Spaak, 21, arrived in this first president of the General Assembly of the United Nations together a sentence in English, and secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. How did she learn so fast?
"I'm a genius," she said.
"Also, the Beatles helped me." The Beatles? "Yes, I listened to their records, which I love. And I heard other records and listened to television and just studied how people talk. It wasn't difficult by accident," she related.

Child Pulling Own Hair Explained by Doctor

BY JOSEPH G. MOLNER, though I used to weigh more than normal.
Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter had a habit of pulling out her hair. She is partially bald now, but the hair is growing back. Is there any way to speed up its growth?—Mrs. P.K.

I doubt if there is any way to speed up the growth. As long as the hair is growing back, let time take care of it.

Dr. Molner

There are various reasons why some youngsters get into this habit, and sometimes we never find out why.

It is a rather common trick of an overactive child, and is comparable to nail-biting, nose picking and other such actions. Sometimes it may be an attention-getter.

Depending on the child's age and circumstances, it can be a nervous reaction to such things as competition with brothers or sisters, an unfavorable home situation, or irregular habits of eating, playing, and sleep. In other words, it's a nervous reaction.

Therefore it is at least worth the effort to note whether any of these circumstances are present.

I've heard of very young children being cured of such pulling by cutting the hair so short they can't get hold of it. In a brief time, so it was reported, the habit was broken. (The question then is whether some other nervous habit develops instead.)

As to hair pulling, occasionally a child will eat the hair, and this can be a serious matter if enough is swallowed to form a hair ball in the stomach. Only a few months ago I observed a case in which the hair ball was of such startling size that it prevented the child from getting enough nourishment, and it had to be removed surgically.

Dear Dr. Molner: A doctor said that an overactive thyroid can cause a person to be underweight. I am very thin and have trouble in gaining. al-

My mother and sister both have thyroid trouble but they are heavy. Are there any signs or symptoms that would indicate anything is wrong with my thyroid? — Mrs. A.B.

An underactive thyroid is indeed likely to contribute to overweight; an over-active thyroid, however, has to be quite dynamic to cause a person to be thin. Many underweight people are that way, not because of thyroid, but because they are physically active and use up the calories they eat, and often because they are satisfied with foods which do not have a high caloric value.

An overactive thyroid is more likely to bring about a sudden loss in weight despite a good appetite, rather than to cause a person to be continually underweight.

Principal symptoms of overactive thyroid include nervousness, excessive sweating, fast heart beat and possibly with palpitations, and a fine tremor of the fingers.

Dear Dr. Molner: Three years ago my aunt had a "ring" inserted for a fallen bladder. Since then she has never returned to the doctor for examination, nor has the ring been removed. Could this cause any difficulties? — Mrs. T.F.D.

These rings, made of hard or soft rubber, should be removed periodically for cleaning and the area should be inspected for irritation. Chronic vaginitis could result from the ring being left for long periods. She should have it checked.

Note to A.F.J.: Yes, blood type remains the same throughout life. And yes, liver is high in iron, but is not necessarily a cure or preventive for anemia.

Of all the problems that pediatricians encounter in children, pinworm is the commonest. To learn the newest methods of treatment for this pest, write for the booklet, "The Commonest Pest, Pinworm," enclosing a long, self-addressed stamped envelope and 20 cents in be coin to cover printing and handling. Sheinwold Overcall Can Cause Trouble

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Bridge experts agree that an overcall at the level of two promises a very strong hand. Otherwise the opponents may double and collect more than enough to pay for what they are giving up. One member of the North American team was sharply reminded of this principle during the recent world championships in Italy.

North East South West Double

Pass	1	2	0

Opening lead — ♠ 9

Many average players would consider the South hand worth an overcall of two diamonds after East's opening bid of one spade. It is not especially dangerous to make such a bid if West is also an average player. When Philip Feldesman, of New York, bid two diamonds with the South hand a few weeks ago he was not playing against average opponents. Pietro Forquet, at his left, has won nine world championships, and not by accident.

Forquet had a very safe double. If East didn't like the double he could rebid instead of passing. If East did pass, and South made the contract, no great damage would be done. South would score 180 instead of 90 points.

Big Penalty The defenders easily took two spades, two hearts, two clubs and one trump trick. South, taking only six tricks, paid a penalty of 500 points.

This would be annoying, but not serious, if East and West had given up a game in order to collect their 500 points. As it turned out, they had given up nothing at all.

When the hand was played in the second room, Eric Murray held the West cards and tried to make game in notrump. The contract hinged on guessing which opponent had the queen of hearts, and Murray guessed wrong.

This is one of the dangers of bidding more than you can make. If you kept quiet instead of bidding, you might wind up with a profit instead of a loss. Feldesman was lucky that Forquet held only three trumps. Otherwise the penalty might have been 800 or even 1,100. The New Yorkers got off light.

Daily Question Dealer, at your right, bids one club. You hold: S 7 6, H 9 7, D A K 10 9 8 2, C Q 10 6. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. The hand is worth an overcall, at the level of one, but not at the level of two. For one thing, you promise to take one trick Titled will be receiving federal approval of to mental retardation facilities, the Menasha planning fund. Other officials also apparently applied for a grant to build a new 20-voice glee club involved in the development, conservation and a marked drop in attendance.

Mayor Kenneth Holmes, City Clerk Harry Kind and Public Works Director Robert Poss attended part of Friday's Capitol Conference on Federal Aids, billed by Gov. Warren Knowles as an effort to show how state bureaus can help local communities participate in the programs.

The Menasha delegation was in accord with the representatives from other communities in spending the greatest portion of their time attending a panel presentation on municipal planning. Of the total attendance estimated at 200 or greater, more than 100 persons jammed the Assembly Chamber to hear state officials discuss topics that included urban renewal and housing, housing for the elderly, planning assistance, planning aids and civil defense aids.

There was much smaller attendance at other morning panel discussions elsewhere in the statehouse on highways, aids, higher education and public welfare.

Long Range Plans
A state Resource Development Department planner explained the high attendance at the planning session by pointing out that to take part in many federal aid programs, communities must first show they are making organized efforts at long-range planning.

The Menasha delegation, however, sampled parts of each of the four morning discussions, moving from the Assembly Chamber and on to the two smaller conference rooms where the discussions were staged. Like the other officials at the conference, they scoured up hand-ful of literature at each of their stops.

Poss spent the entire morning at the planning meeting. Among the speakers was Alvin Karmick, director of local and regional planning in the Resource Development Department, who has worked with local officials in the effort to receive federal aid for comprehensive planning.

The mayor stopped at each of the session, finally settling on the education panel, which included discussions of the federal vocational education and training programs, rehabilitation services, the higher education acts, implications for communities and juvenile delinquency training for police.

Libra's Projects
The mayor also showed interest in a single sheet outline of recent spending in Wisconsin for development of library facilities.

None of the local delegation reported discovering any programs of great immediate interest, though the mayor indicated he intends to inquire

His next assignment was to Sts. Peter and Paul, Hortonville, with a mission at Dale, where he served from Oct. 13, 1938 to Feb. 20, 1947 when he was assigned to Holy Cross. During his 19 years at Holy Cross he directed a building program which included a new parochial school, convent and rectory.

Until this time visitors must use the parking area accessible from Oneida Street and will enter at the present temporary Oneida Street entrance. Present visiting hours will remain — from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 8 p.m.

A public open house of these new areas and facilities is planned for the fall, Knutson said.

Legislative Salary Study Meetings Set at Menasha

Attorney General Is Rapped For 'Erroneous Statements'

MENASHA — A blue ribbon committee assigned by Gov. Warren P. Knowles to study legislative salaries will hold public meetings here Monday and Tuesday. William E. Kellett, retired president of the Kimberly-Clark Corp., is chairman of the committee which came under fire earlier in the week from the attorney general for allegedly violating Wisconsin's anti-secrecy law.

Kellett, who maintains an office at his Winnefox Point home here near Lake Winnebago, announced Friday afternoon the meetings next week will be held there.

He specifically invited representatives of the press to attend.

LaFollette Erred In another development, a closed session had been conducted Friday that Atty. Gen.

LaFollette said in an opinion Thursday that the Kellett Committee had "flagrantly violated" the state's law against closed meetings when the group balked at discussing proposed legislative pay raises with newsmen present.

Kaiser noted, however, that the meeting Wednesday simply had been adjourned and no charges had been filed.

To charge them with violating the law when they did not break the law is very serious," said Kaiser, who was present at the meeting.

The businessmen's committee, which has advised state officials on cost-saving efficiency improvements, had been asked to study legislative salaries after Gov. Warren P. Knowles said he would veto an abruptly passed bill boosting lawmakers' pay from $5,400 to $9,600 a year.

Adman Restyles 'View,' Plans New 'Showtime'

A veteran type director and graphic arts designer, with strong ideas about how daily and weekly publications should be styled, is responsible for the "new look" VIEW and Showtime magazines to be introduced with Sunday's Post-Crescent.

Pat Taylor, 59, Bellaire Ct., has been associated as a typographer with Creative Group, Inc., Appleton advertising agency, since 1960. His hobby, as well as his profession, is the effective design of publications, and he is a close student of such masters of magazine layout as Henry Wolf, of Show, and Otto Storch, of McCall's.

"Typography in magazines should always be second to the content of the magazine," Taylor is convinced. "The keynote now is quietness of design, not shouting. The 'poster look' is old hat, passe."

In designing the new cover and interior formats for Showtime and VIEW, Taylor tried to achieve what he describes as "quiet elegance." The basic design of a newspaper magazine must be accurate, in its fundamentals, he notes, "so that stories and articles can come forth without any confusion on the reader's part."

In order to achieve a separate personality for each magazine, Taylor chose Times Roman Bold type for column headings and mastheads in VIEW, and News Gothic Bold type for Showtime.

Deadline Problems

Both are very clean, modern faces — easy to read," in his opinion. "Also, the use of white space in magazines nowadays is handled well. It may look wasted for the layman, but it is

Gov. Knowles Cites Need to Prevent Red Tape in Aid

Governor Explains State's Role In Solving Urban Problems

MADISON — An extension of "creative federalism" is needed to prevent the growing federal aid programs in use throughout the country from bogging down localized; and Washington — too far away," Knowles said Friday.

He spoke to more than 150 state, county, town and local officials gathered for the Governor's Conference on Federal Aids to Cities, Towns and Villages in the state capital.

Knowles called for a systematic approach to state assistance in securing federal aids for localities.

"In too many states we have seen massive confusion and red tape associated with all federal aid programs. Top heavy administration from Washington and sluggish state action has bogged programs down with a considerable amount of waste," he explained.

Important Role

"We realize that the urban sprawl of Milwaukee, Green Bay, Appleton, Beloit, Kenosha, Racine or any other city may be our own problem."

"We recognize that problems like your community's air or water pollution also involves our air and our water. You can't contaminate the water at its source or your neighbors' air without sharing the adverse effects."

"We realize that we are not doing our fair share if we fail to provide the necessary assistance to your branches of government," Knowles said.

Outlines Steps

He outlined several steps that in the future will provide greater coordination between localities seeking aid and the state which has a voice in the approval of most aid projects to local communities.

Included are a new federal aid unit in the state Department of Administration, a state Department of Resource Development.
